GNI'S ACHIEVEMENTS

- > Offering the only multistakeholder, human rights independent assessment in the technology sector - having completed its fourth cycle in October 2023 - through which a growing number of companies in the technology ecosystem have identified best practices, discussed challenges, and exchanged constructive feedback with human rights experts and fellow companies.
- > Providing sustained opportunities for shared learning in a confidential setting, allowing companies to inform their internal policies on how new technologies may impact freedom of expression and privacy. GNI's learning calls discuss new and ongoing opportunities and challenges that technology companies face in different jurisdictions, with an eye towards fostering constructive collaboration.
- > Utilizing its authoritative platform to engage with policymakers, stakeholders and in international initiatives to shape the regulatory conversations on tech company policies and practices that protect and enhance human rights. These include the Christchurch Call and the Freedom Online Coalition. GNI has also partnered with multilateral institutions, including the Council of Europe, the OECD, UNESCO and UN Human Rights.
- > Representing a growing and increasingly diverse membership, including company members in Africa, Asia and Europe and academics, civil society organizations, and investors from every major region, which have informed companies' operations on the ground.
